

I believe mandatory voting should be instituted, as such, citizens should be legally required to vote. The source I chose argues the opposite, that citizens have a right not to be compelled to vote and civic duties do not justify legal enforcement (Saunders, 2018). I strongly disagree with Saunders' main arguments of citizens having a right not to vote even if voting is considered a civic duty and that citizens can fulfill their civic responsibilities and duties without actually voting (Saunders, 2018, p. 93). I chose this paper as I strongly disagree with Saunders' reasoning as mentioned above and as it's relevant, has a clear purpose, current, accurate and has a credible author. Firstly, this paper argues directly against my view, the need to institute compulsory voting, likewise, this also is the purpose of the paper, to defend and argue in favor of citizens' right not to vote. As it came out in 2018 it still remains recent and as Saunders argues in an objective manner with all his sources properly and fully cited it is relevant and accurate. Finally, Saunders has over 50+ works, peer reviewed 6 papers, graduated from the University of Oxford and currently works at the University of Southampton making him credible.

Bibliography

Saunders, B. (2018). A Further Defence of the Right Not to Vote. Res Publica (Liverpool, England), 24(1), 93–108. <https://doi.org/10.1007/s11158-017-9391-0>